

Armstrong on Reinventing Performance Management presents a holistic approach to performance management, drawing on Michael Armstrong's vast research and experience. Most organizations have performance management processes in one form or another, but these are often based on formal annual reviews, forced rankings and directly linked to pay decisions. These traditional approaches are often at the expense of continuous feedback and focus on looking back at what has or has not been achieved rather than looking forward. Direct links to pay decisions avert attention from people development, and managers often get lost in the bureaucracy of complex forms rather than fully engaging with their people.

The book details how to build a culture of ongoing feedback and coaching and provides case studies of how this approach to building performance has been effective in organizations such as Gap and Microsoft. Filled with practical advice, including how to improve objective-setting and identify potential, it enables organizations to remove overly bureaucratic and ineffective systems that are based on top-down judgments and ratings, and demonstrates how to get line managers' support for the process, focusing on actionable feedback and growth.

Michael Armstrong is a former chief examiner of the Chartered Institute of Personal Development (CIPD), a joint managing partner of e-reward and an independent management consultant. He has sold over 500,000 books on the subject of HRM including the bestselling Armstrong's Handbook of Human Resource Management Practice, Armstrong's Handbook of Reward Management Practice and Armstrong's Handbook of Strategic Human Resource Management (all published by Kogan Page).
