Praise for the first edition:

'I look forward to teaching from this great new text. An excellent project, well conceived and executed, I even like the parts I disagree with.' – Erik Jones, The Johns Hopkins University, Bologna, Italy

'This innovative textbook... undertakes the challenge of guiding students through hotly contested territory, and will add to the excitement and pedagogical benefit of the journey... [It] should find an important place in the EU teaching armoury.'
– Roger Morgan, Times Higher Education

'[A]n interesting and accessible general textbook on European integration... the authors go straight to the point and make clear arguments. They are also always engaging, critical and deliberately provocative.' – Political Studies Review

In the fully revised and updated second edition of this highly engaging text, prominent scholars from around the world reflect on the current and future state of the European Union. Representing the whole spectrum of thinking about the EU, from pro-European to openly Eurosceptic perspectives, the authors debate 16 key controversies in relation to the nature, current state and future of European integration. Thematic chapters address the most important issues in EU politics, with authors presenting diametrically opposed views on each controversy.

All chapters in the second edition have been thoroughly revised, with new chapters added to take account of recent developments. These cover the crisis of the euro, business lobbying in the EU, Britain's relationship with the EU, and the pros and cons of German hegemony. This comprehensive and accessible text will prove invaluable reading for students of the EU by providing both sides of the debate in some of the most contentious issues in European integration.

Hubert Zimmermann is Professor of International Relations, University of Marburg, Germany, and was previously DAAD Visiting Associate Professor, Cornell University, USA.

Andreas Dür is Professor of International Politics at the University of Salzburg, Austria.
